Small jobs prevent big, expensive jobs later

If you knew what things you could do to increase your home's efficiency and save money, you would take them on, especially if they would only take a few minutes to do. For example:

- * Take a leaf blower to your air conditioner's condenser, which is the large box outside or the out-facing end of a window unit. If you blow out the muck and debris, you could save up to 15 percent on cooling costs.
 - * Slide your clothes dryer forward, pull off the vent hose, and vacuum out the built-up lint. That can save clothes-drying costs of about 25 percent, say plumbers writing in CNNMoney.com.
 - * If your heating system uses radiators, buy a key at the hardware store and use it to bleed the air out of the system. See Familyhandyman.com for instructions.
 - * Check your wooden window sills for any cracks and chipped paint. Fill the cracks with caulk and paint them to prevent wood rot.
 - * Cut shrubs back so they are a foot away from the house to delay having to get a full exterior paint job.
 - * Keep your garage door tracks, casement gearboxes and badly working doorknobs lubricated. Just spray them with WD-40, which lubricates and cleans.
 - * Put your mechanical equipment through its paces now and then. Run the garbage disposal if you don't use it often. Do the same with Jacuzzi pumps and the plumbing fixtures in a rarely used bathroom.
 - * Check the emergency shutoffs for your water supply lines. The valves are under the sinks, behind the showers and on the mains in the basement.
- Making sure they work now will save time and frustration if you and your plumber have to use them later.

Studies show:

E-cigs are not likely to help smokers quit

Researchers at the University of California, San Diego, find that (contrary to e-cig advertising), smokers of regular cigarettes are not more likely to quit or smoke less than if they used electronic cigarettes.

Their one-year study of smokers shows that those who used e-cigs were 59 percent less likely to quit smoking, and 49 percent less likely to cut down on smoking.

Statistics have not been compiled, but researchers say the overall effect of e-cigs on quitting rates is negative.

The American College of Physicians calls for banning advertising, banning the flavorings that attract children and teenagers to smoking, and taxing of devices and cartridges.

The CDC reports that in 2014, 13 percent of high school students used e-cigs, three times as many as in 2013.

Halloween fun at home

Halloween is now one of the biggest consumer holidays in America. According to the National Retail Federation's 2014 Halloween Consumer Spending Survey, celebrants spent an average of $77 each on their costumes, candy, party decorations and greeting cards.

But more parents have safety concerns about their children out in the dark, knocking on the doors of strangers, or dashing across the street. Children are more likely to be killed in a pedestrian/car accident on Halloween than on any other night.

You can make a great Halloween scene safe at home with some easy tricks.

Get glow make up you can find at Halloween stores and smear it all over a jack-o-lantern. In the dark, it glows scary green.

Glow sticks make an especially frightening balloon. Break the stick to make it glow, put it in a balloon, blow the balloon up. Then draw a face and turn out the lights. Eerie!

Other tricks with a pumpkin to thrill the kids: Carve your pumpkin, making sure to cut out the top hat. Put a glass inside the pumpkin and fill the glass with ordinary dish soap. Add some dry ice to the soap. Boom! The pumpkin man spews enough gross, but completely safe, soapy bubbles to delight any 8-year-old.

For treats, make the usual themed cupcakes. Put out the spicy queso surrounded by black and orange tortilla chips. Fill plastic pumpkins with candy corn, apples, mini-candy bars and gummy worms. And fill a cauldron with Dracula's blood punch (add berry vodka for adult version).

Then, fire up great movies for the season: Monsters, Inc., Casper and The Adventures of Ichabod and Mr. Toad (G rated). Halloween; Hocus Pocus; Scooby Doo; Raiders of the Lost Ark, Batman: Mask of the Phantasm and Beetlejuice (PG rated for the not-so-squeamish)

Is home tech just too much tech?

Today, smart-home systems can control the lighting, entertainment systems, the garage door, the front door and even control the temperature in the swimming pool.

But the technology is young. One owner of a smart-home system told the Wall Street Journal, he has a regular electric switch, to override his hard-wired smarty pants home. He has problems about five times a year with the system.

Some system owners complain the systems actually complicate things. They break. They don't talk to each other. One new gadget makes another gadget irrelevant. No wonder people are selective about what they install.

At the California Institute for Energy and Environment, experts conclude that the key to smart-home success is reducing the number of steps it takes to get something done.

But smart systems also have to talk to each other. If you like the iPhone then you might install Apple's new HomeKit. Google's Nest system works with other Nest things. The company is also developing a project called Brillo to offer a way for tech gizmos to work with each other.

According to Gartner, a research firm, some smart devices will go the way of Betamax when a system standard finds public acceptance. Then all devices will work to that standard.

Researchers link sugar intake to diseases

It's no surprise that a diet high in added sugar will make you gain weight and could lead to type 2 diabetes.

But we do need a certain amount of sugar in our diets, our cells would die without it.

The required level, however, is easily reached with fruit and with foods and drinks that don't even taste sweet, like dairy products.

Researchers now have to focus on sugar because we are eating so much more of it than in the past. This overconsumption can play a part in cardiovascular disease, stroke, hypertension, high cholesterol, gum disease, fatty liver disease and others.

To control sugar in your diet, it helps to know how much is in various foods; 100 grams of cold breakfast cereal isn't very high in sugar content, but the sweetened versions are much higher.

Take regular Cheerios with 1.1 teaspoons of sugar. Honey Nut Cheerios are tasty, but have way more sugar.

Regular corn flakes have 2.5 teaspoons, but sweetened versions are much higher. Shredded Wheat has just 1 teaspoon of sugar. Fruit Loops cereal has 10.6 (a teaspoon contains about 4 grams of sugar).

Check the labels on products before you buy. There's a big difference in cookies, for example. Larger peanut butter cookies have 10 teaspoons each.

Sweetened soda has a bad rep, but deserves it. A can of Coca Cola, or most other sodas, has 7 teaspoons of sugar.

Though estimates vary, UC Berkeley researchers estimate that Americans consume an average of at least 75 pounds of added sugar annually.

New Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommend a limit of about 12 teaspoons (50 grams) per day for someone consuming 2,000 calories a day.

Sugar may become second only to nicotine in being blamed for health problems.

Meet Jennifer Martin, although most of you probably have. For those who have not, here is a face to go with the voice. Jennifer and her husband Michael moved to Vero Beach from West Palm Beach when they were expecting their first child, a son (Corbin) in 2008. Jennifer started her career with Life Maid Easy back in 2009. She started as one of our house cleaners but quickly worked her way up to office manager and sales rep. Since then she has had her second child (Ember) in 2013 and we were honored to have her baby shower at LME. Jennifer is a valuable asset to LME as all of our wonderful staff is. She handles the schedule and all payment accounts for LME. She works very hard to accommodate all of our clients as well as employees and truly enjoys doing her job. Her cheerful demeanor accompanied with a positive attitude and strong work ethic makes her a one of a kind employee. She's usually smiling when she answers the phone here at LME which I'm sure you notice during your conversation with her. Thank you Jennifer for all your hard work!

Travelers think the new luggage is the best invention since the wheelie

Your phone is smart, but how much can it help if your bags are lost?

Soon it will play a pivotal role. Luggage manufacturers are beginning to release high-tech bags that can be controlled via smartphone apps.

Fortune has surveyed the products and provides this information:

Bluesmart is selling bags equipped with a Bluetooth-enabled lock, GPS tracking, a built-in scale and a USB port for charging a device.

Samsonite has a new line of GenTrakR suitcases with built-in LugLoc technology, which allows owners to track their bags.

Andiamo will soon introduce a smart carry-on bag with a Wi-Fi hotspot, battery charger and built-in scale.

Trunkster is selling bags with a tracking system, scale and two USB ports.

Delsey will introduce its Pluggage line of smart suitcases next year.

Rimowa, a German luggage maker, is developing a smart suitcase line with permanently embedded electronic bag tags.

All of this means that if you're any kind of techie, your bags will never be lost for long.

Get fit now for an enjoyable retirement

You can see yourself taking a swim in the pool of a fancy Hawaiian resort, riding a bike through Central Park in New York or hiking in a beautiful national park. The vision makes you feel wonderful and your retirement time is not so far away.

But will you be strong enough and fit enough to do these things?

Dr. James Hill, executive director of the Anschutz Health and Wellness Center at the University of Colorado, says most people can make a list of their fitness goals and achieve many of them in a few months.

At the university, Dr. Hill knows they are seeing more and more retirees and pre-retirees who want to be able to hike, bike, swim and engage with other physically fit retirees.

Walking is still the most popular exercise because it's convenient, can be done almost anywhere and doesn't require special equipment. Many pre-retirees take exercise classes such as Zumba. Yoga is popular. And others want to continue playing tennis or even soccer or hockey.

Many of Dr. Hill's clients are very interested in healthy eating and The biggest mistake is trying to do too much too soon, especially among those who don't want to be overweight anymore.
